Criticizes Landfill Operation

By D. Kelly Scruton

The City Council was told Monday night that the city is not living up to its agreement to maintain the new sanitary landfill near Beaman in accordance with rules and regulations as recommended by the Missouri Department of Health. The complaint came from Bill N. Glenn, Route 5, whose home is nearby.

Glenn took the floor just before the council adjourned. He said he resided in the area near the new sanitary landfill and charged that the condition had become deplorable in only a few days. At the site there is uncovered garbage over the area he said.

Abide By Rules

"The city," Glenn said, "agreed to use the area and conduct its operations in accordance with the rules of the State Department of Health. If this situation is allowed to continue, it's going to be a lousy place to live."

"My bird dog has been going there and he hasn't had a meal at home for several days. All that I am asking is for the city to please conduct this operation as you have agreed to do. Have the garbage and rubbish covered up and packed down in accordance with the recommendations," Glenn closed.

Councilman Walter Jessee told the council and Glenn that when he was at the landfill several days ago things looked all right.

"I know they had some trouble with the 'cat' and it broke down and we went back to the old fill for a few days," Jessee said.

"I assure you that I shall take this up with Mr. Ditton who is in charge of the operation and see that it is taken care of immediately. We are going to keep that place as the city agreed."

The city leased the land from Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Callis, after which area residents sought an injunction to keep the city from using the ground. In Circuit Court last week the city was allowed to use the ground only after agreeing to comply with the rules and recommendations of the Missouri Department of Health and obtaining permission from the County Court and the Department of Health.

City officers reports approved during the council meeting were:

Morton, library fines, $152.33; and Chief of Police William E. Miller, police fines $1,698, for a total of $26,233.91.

Department bills for February approved for payment were:

Candidates Seeking JuCo Board Seats

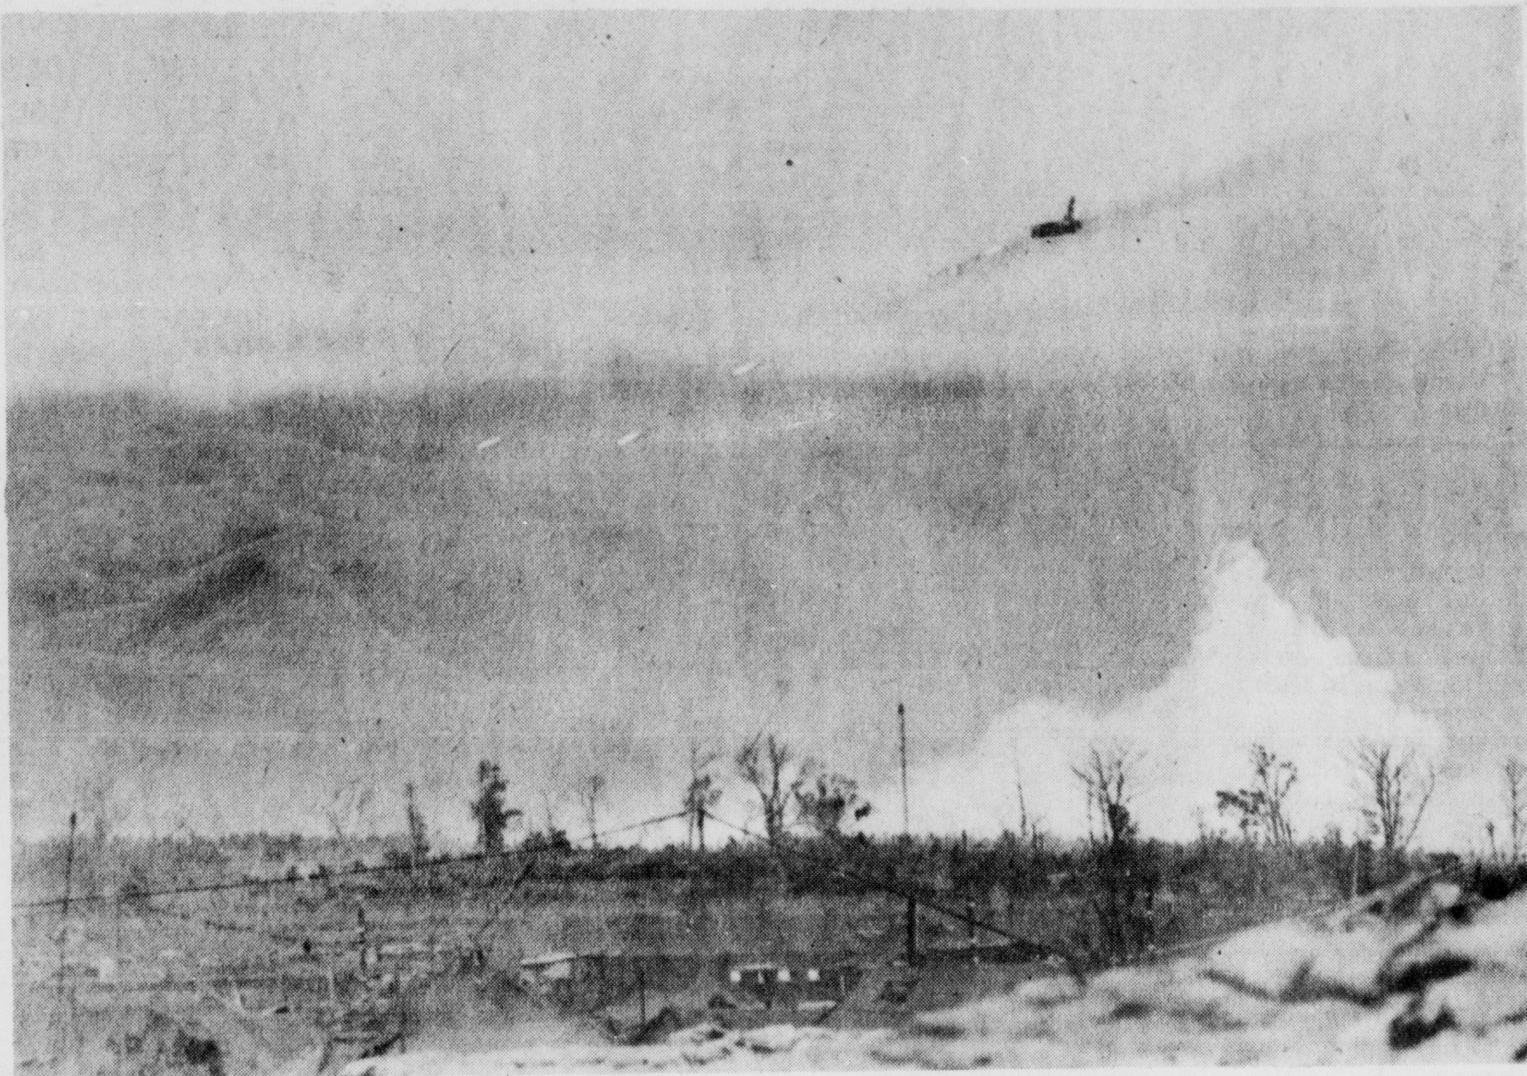

Three candidates, two of them incumbents, are seeking six-year terms on the Board of Trustees of the Pettis-Benton Counties Junior College District. Monday was the last day for candidates to file.

Seeking re-election are Dr. C. Gordon Stauffacher, Sedalia, and Clarence Frisch, Lincoln. Stauffacher is unopposed, whereas C. R. Leppert, Lincoln, challenges Frisch for the trustee ship from that area.

Lepper is vice president of the Benton County Taxpayers Association, which is attempting to dissolve the Junior College District.

The trustees will be named during the regular election April 2.

Both Stauffacher and Frisch have served two-year terms on the board.

Spacemen, Make Way For Women

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — You often hear about the "human factors" of man in space. Can he survive a journey to Mars? How does he react to weightlessness, and the hostility that goes with it?

Yet, rarely do you hear about his most personal of "human factors"—the weaker sex, woman, and her role in America's future space ventures.

"Why not?" says Lawrence E. Jenkins, an aerospace engineer who has studied the question and posed it as a serious scientific consideration. "Why not send women along?"

Jenkins, manager of space systems technology for Lockheed Missiles and Space Co., Sunnyvale, Calif., discussed the point at a convention of some 250 experts meeting to discuss manned missions to the planets, flights that would take up to three years to complete. In a scientific paper, he proposed:

"A new crew composition approach that should be considered is that of a crew composed of men and women."

He said in an interview that to his surprise when he began researching the psychological factors to be considered in picking six to 10 or more crew members for extended space journeys, he discovered virtually a complete absence of study of possible mixed crews.

"Take a spaceflight lasting as long as it would take to get to Mars. The crew is going to be very dependent on each other," Jenkins explained. "I'm not talking so much about the sexual drive, and the sexual needs in man as I am the emotional stability the opposite sex can provide."

"Just like the fellow who seems more stable when he gets home from the office if he's with his wife, the woman he loves," he said. "There's a natural bond between man and wife that can lead to more understanding and stability during a period of ordeal. Thus, it could be a mental health safety factor."

"Now, she'd have to be a functioning crew member. She couldn't be taken along merely as a guest," Jenkins explained. In fact women have proven on earth that there are some jobs they're more suited for than men."

"There are many female scientists around today who, if they had their own way, would be in the astronaut corps now," Jenkins said.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has no announced rule against lady astronauts. It is known that several have applied, but none ever made it to the final selection board.

Poultry Added By NFO To 'Withholding' List

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP)—The National Farmers Organization added poultry Monday to the products it is asking farmers to withhold from market to force higher prices.

NFO President Oren Lee Staley, here to address a grain and feed convention, said the NFO advised producers "to hold chickens, commonly known as broilers, for 19 cents per pound and turkeys for 26 cents per pound."

Broilers now bring an average of about 13.3 cents per pound and turkeys about 17.5 cents, Staley said, while parity prices are 20.5 cents for broilers and 31.3 cents for turkeys.

The holding action began Jan. 11 with grain and was extended to meat on Feb. 12. Staley has said other products, including milk, will be added later.

"We are satisfied with the progress made in other commodities and are confident that contracts across the board will be secured at fair prices for farmers," Staley declared.

After three weeks of withholding meat animals and seven of boycotting grain markets price gains have been minor and some of these were attributed to factors other than the 35-state boycott.

There has been some curtailment in the number of cattle, hogs and lambs marketed and prices responded by increasing early in the holding action.

However, the action lost ground both in prices and receipts last week. Greater numbers of lambs went to market while prices either held or declined.

Prices for top choice cattle have risen, but there has been no improvement in lower choice grade steers. The average price for the best hogs rose 7.5 cents a pound.

All sales were below NFO goals.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reports no decrease in federally inspected meat slaughter.

Corn was selling for $1.13 a bushel Monday, a fraction above the price Jan. 11 when the grain boycott was called with a target price of $1.50 for corn.

Wheat and soybeans were up five to seven cents, but neither was near the NFO goal.

GOP Victory Means Peace, Nixon Vows

HAMPTON, N.H. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon renewed his pledge today that a Republican administration would end the war in Vietnam and secure peace in the Pacific.

The former vice president said in Manchester, N.H., Feb. 28 that President Johnson could end the war before November by a coordinated program of military, political and economic and diplomatic offensives. If not, Nixon said then, "a new administration will be elected. We will end the war and we will win the peace."

Resuming his campaign for the New Hampshire presidential primary, Nixon said President Johnson has had the world's greatest power at his disposal but "never has so much power been used less effectively" as in Vietnam.

Despite High Losses, Viet Cong Continue To Attack in South

SAIGON (AP) — Three hundred Viet Cong invaded a provincial capital at the southern end of Vietnam today and seized the hospital, but government troops drove them out of the city after a day-long fight. Military spokesmen said 195 of the Communists were slain.

The Communists also shelled a dozen provincial capitals, six district towns, and 14 military bases and camps including the U.S. base at Cam Ranh Bay, once considered the safest spot in South Vietnam. It was the second straight day of widespread shelling.

Although runways were pitted, Cam Ranh Bay was not severely damaged and flights were not delayed. This is the base President Johnson visited in his two trips to Vietnam since he became president, in November 1966 and last Dec. 23.

Allied communiques reported more than 500 Communist troops were killed Monday and Tuesday, many of them in fighting unrelated to the enemy shelling.

In the air war, U.S. B52s kept up the pressure on the North Vietnamese encircling the Marine base at Khe Sanh in the far northwest. They laid down a carpet of bombs in five separate raids north and west of the Marine Lines.

The attacks on the cities and camps followed Monday's shelling of seven air bases, two U.S. Command posts and four other installations. Most of the two-day shelling were not followed up by ground attacks.

One provincial capital hit was Can Tho, the delta nerve center for both military and civilian operations 80 miles southwest of Saigon. The government reported 13 civilians killed.

It was different, however, at Ca Mau, a provincial capital of about 40,000 people at the tip of the Mekong Delta 153 miles southwest of Saigon. The Viet Cong invaded the city after a softening up barrage for mortars and recoilless rifles.

One company seized the provincial hospital and held it for 11 hours before government reinforcements retook it.

Sporadic mortar and recoilless rifle fire continued late in the day. Allied fighter-bombers, helicopter gunships and artillery joined the ground troops against the Viet Cong forces, who were reported to have split into small groups throughout the town.

South Vietnamese military headquarters said 110 Viet Cong troops had been killed and 42 weapons captured at Ca Mau. Government casualties were said to be light.

Seek More Information About Korean Demands

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials are trying to determine whether any U.S. admission of guilt and apology to North Korea would win release of the intelligence ship Pueblo and 82 surviving crewmen captured six weeks ago.

The basic problem President Johnson and his advisers face is whether the United States can or should admit and apologize for something—the Pueblo's alleged intrusion into North Korean territorial waters—which officials say they don't believe the ship did.

The apology issue came into sharp public focus Monday with North Korea's broadcast of a letter to President Johnson which Pyongyang Radio said was signed by all 82 crew members.

The contents of the letter had already been dispatched to the President by U.S. negotiators at Panmunjom, Korea, who had received it from North Korean representatives.

The letter claimed the Pueblo "intruded into the territorial waters" of North Korea at five different points. It said the crewmen believe "our repatriation can be realized only when our government frankly admits the fact that we intruded into the territorial waters of (North Korea) and committed hostile acts, and sincerely apologizes for these acts and gives assurance that they will not be repeated."

The first concern of administration authorities was to try to determine the authenticity of the signatures on the letter. It was reported that the Panmunjom negotiators were speeding the text to Washington for study of the signatures.

The letter's emphasis on admitting violations of North Korea's territorial waters and apologizing was reportedly in line with demands by North Korean negotiators in a series of closed Panmunjom meetings. The 10th such meeting was held Sunday night.

It is understood—although not officially confirmed in Washington—that North Korea has indicated such steps by the United States could lead to the settlement of the Pueblo problem.

Following North Korea's Jan. 23 seizure of the ship, U.S. officials denied the charge the Pueblo had violated North Korean territory. They said it was operating under orders to remain outside North Korea's 12-mile limit.

The latest letter claimed to be from the crew is one of a series of "confessions" alleged by North Korea to have come from the vessel's captain, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher, and various other crew members.

Officials said none of the five violations claimed in the latest letter was new because each of them had been referred to in one or another of the previous "confessions."

Resolution on Bond Issue Is Passed by Council

(By D. Kelly Scruton)

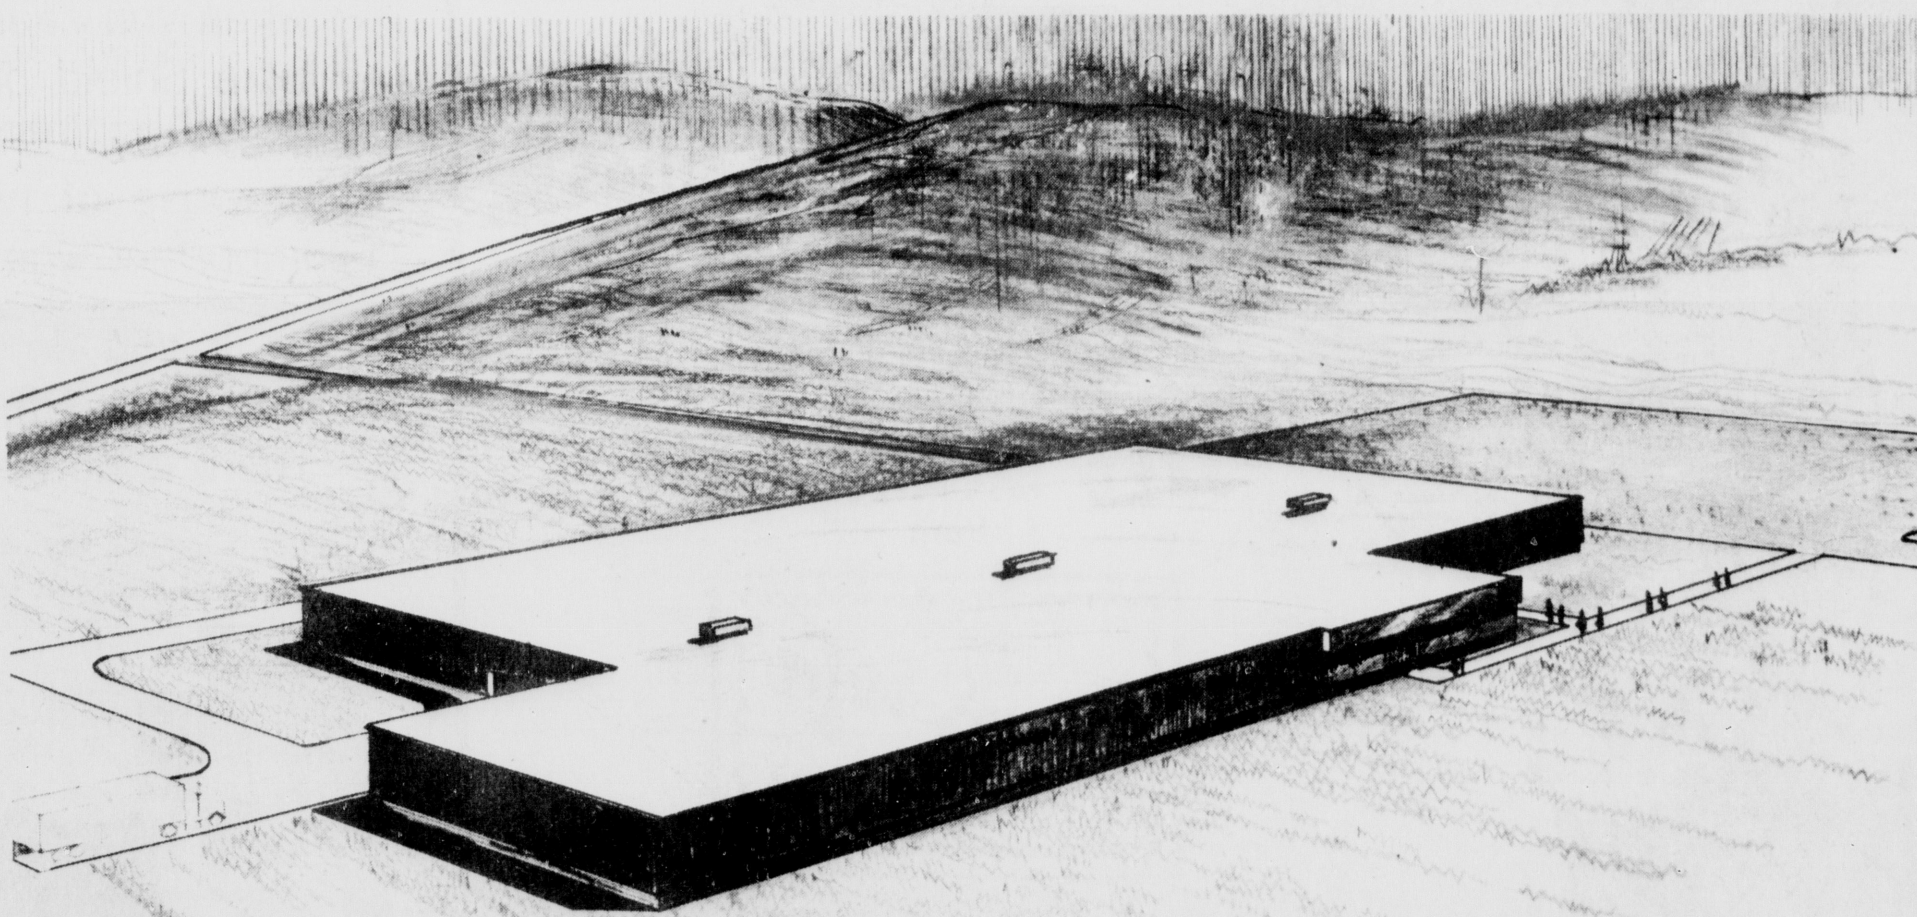

A resolution was passed, Monday night, by the City Council calling for a bond election of $1,050,000 for the expansion of Town and Country Shoes, Inc., to be included in the election of April 2. The bonds will be similar to that which were recently passed for the expansion of the Rival Manufacturing Co.

The City Council also approved the securing of the services of the investment firm of Perry, Adams & Lewis, Inc., of Kansas City, to provide the advice and experience for the proper handling of this program to a final conclusion. This firm will represent both the City and the Town and Country Shoes, Inc., according to the agreement.

The firm is to receive a $25,000 fee to cover all of the enumerated services and expenses. The fee will be payable from the proceeds of the bond issue when payment has been received by the City of Sedalia.

An ordinance which will be submitted to the voters of Sedalia at the City election, April 2, is a proposal to raise the Library mill tax from one to two mills per dollar valuation. The ordinance also designated the regular general election date for this submission, and also named the voting places and Judges of election.

Arkansas to Open

Commercial Navigation on River Means Boom to Economy of Area

By GORDON BROWN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — This is the year Arkansans have been anticipating for a long time — the year commercial navigation begins on the Arkansas River.

Barring the unexpected, the first leg of the new 9-foot navigation channel will be opened to Little Rock next October.

The navigation channel, which will reach Fort Smith, Ark., in 1969 and Catoosa, Okla., in 1970, is a major part of a $1.2 billion Arkansas River development program now nearing completion.

Both Arkansas and Oklahoma are pinning great hopes on the navigation project, anticipating that it will greatly boost the area's economy.

They envision much barge traffic on the river, many new industries and new markets for their agricultural and mineral resources.

Their dream began more than 30 years ago, but only in 1946 did Congress authorize the Arkansas River comprehensive river development program.

The program includes construction of many large dams which, while they will be operated as part of the navigation system, provide flood control, hydroelectric power, water supply and recreation. Many would have been built anyway if there had been no navigation project.

Construction of the navigation features began in the mid-1950's over considerable opposition.

But each time the powerful Arkansas and Oklahoma congressional delegations won inclusion of the funds in the annual public works appropriations. Most potent among those delegates was Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark.

The project thus remained on schedule and now is within two years and about $300 to $400 million of completion.

The navigation project proper includes $452 million to build a system of 13 navigation locks and dams plus a $133 million program for bank stabilization and channel rectification.

In addition are the $79 million Dardanelle and $64 million Ozark Dams, including locks, in Arkansas and the $95 million Kerr and the 77 million Webber Falls Dams, including locks, in Oklahoma.

Other features include the $123 million Keystone Dam, the $43.5 million Oogalah, the $120 million Eufaula, the $42.5 million Ft. Gibson and the $26 million Tenkiller Ferry Dams in Oklahoma. Most of these also are for power, flood control and other purposes.

The channel itself starts at the Mississippi River and proceeds 19 miles through the White River and a canal to the Arkansas River, then up the Arkansas for 374 miles to near Muskogee, Okla., where it then proceeds up the Verdigris River for 52 miles to Catoosa, near Tulsa. The total length is 445 miles.

There have been suggestions made that a navigation channel might be extended through the Eufaula Reservoir and up the Canadian River to Oklahoma City and also possibly up the Arkansas River to Wichita and Hutchinson, Kan.

However, those extensions are far in the future.

Dismayed At Speech By Nasser

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli officials said today President Gamal Abdel Nasser's speech vowing to regain every inch of soil occupied by Israel as a result of the June war was a "serious setback to peace."

"We can only hope there is a difference between this sort of demagoguery and actual policy making in Egypt," said Foreign Ministry spokesman David Rivlin.

Nasser, a three-time loser in war with Israel, told a rally near Cairo Sunday that Israel's announcement last week that it no longer considers the west bank of the Jordan River "enemy territory" would "cost her dearly."

"We will be a solidly united front against our common enemy to liberate the occupied areas," Nasser said.

Rivlin commented: "When the whole world is looking to Israel and the Arabs to take the big step and talk peace, Nasser's speech was very disappointing and confusing."

Officials said there had been signs of moderation in Cairo in the last few weeks but the "warlike" speech dashed hopes that Egypt and Jordan are willing to meet Israel in direct negotiations.

However, some informed sources believed Nasser made his fiery declarations to placate critics in Egypt and bolster his prestige in the Arab world rather than to torpedo the possibility of peace talks.

Israel announced last week it was willing to meet the Arabs under U.N. auspices and hinted that contacts with Cairo and Amman indicated the Arabs would probably sit down at the conference table.

boosters say they expect many new industries to locate along the river to use the cheap freight rates and the supply of fresh water. They anticipate a big boom in sales of coal which underlies Western Arkansas and Eastern Oklahoma and in farm, forestry and petroleum products.

McClellan recently pointed out that Army Engineers, in justifying the channel, estimated freight traffic at 13.2 million tons yearly. However, he said, they had estimated Ohio River traffic at 13 million tons and that river now carries 100 million tons. Other waterways, he said, similarly have freight traffic far in excess of the early estimates.

He said the Arkansas River traffic might grow to 40 tons yearly but if it reached only half that amount, the annual traffic benefits would be $100 million and the project would pay for itself in a dozen years.

Virtually every city along the river route has made heavy investments in port facilities and industrial parks.

The channel will link the two states by water to a 9,000 mile waterway system extending to Chicago, St. Paul, Sioux City, Pittsburgh, Knoxville, New Orleans, Mobile, Panama City and various Texas coast ports.

A score or so of barge line concerns have filed applications for permission to serve the channel.

U.S.-British Venture On New Radar

By BOB HORTON
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States plans to build a new over-the-horizon radar in Britain that sources said would give this country adequate warning against the Soviet Union's new orbital bomb.

The new radar will reportedly have the ability to peek around the earth's curvature and spot approaching missiles or orbital devices.

Existing line-of-sight radars, including the ballistic missile early warning system extending across Canada and in Britain, can detect hostile rockets only after they rise above the horizon.

The new over-the-horizon radar would be operated in Britain under a joint agreement similar to that covering an early-warning installation at Fylingdale Moor.

Officially the Pentagon was mum on the matter Monday, acknowledging only that the United States is talking with Britain on several projects, including over-the-horizon radar.

Former Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said last November the new radar would be a countermeasure to the Soviets' so-called Fractional Orbital Bombardment System.

Retired Air Force Gen. Bernard A. Schriever told a National Space Club audience in Washington Monday night the orbital missile is the most significant element in the Soviet's new strategic force.

Schriever, who headed development of the U.S. ballistic missile and space system and who often clashed with McNamara over aviation-space goals, added: "Every indication points toward the development by the Soviet Union of still more sophisticated space systems, including improved versions of orbital weapons."

He said the comparative strength of the U.S. missile force is steadily declining while the Soviets are enlarging their force by some 200 missiles annually.

McNamara said the Soviets probably were developing the orbital bomb as a weapon to destroy U.S. strategic bombers before they could take off in wartime.

The Soviet weapon, because of a low trajectory, could be detected by existing radar only about three minutes before blasting Strategic Air Command bases, giving the United States virtually no time to get its bombers aloft.

By contrast, radars in the ballistic missile early warning system are supposed to provide 15 minutes alert time against incoming missiles.

McNamara said installation of over-the-horizon radar units would allow the United States to recapture the necessary 15 minutes warning time so far as the Soviets' Fractional Orbital Bombardment System is concerned.

It appeared that installing over-the-horizon radar in England might give the United States even more than 15 minutes warning.

Represent Poor

OEO Lawyers May Bite Hand That Feeds Them

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Office of Economic Opportunity maintains a full-time staff of lawyers which rivals that of the Justice Department, in more ways than one.

The OEO lawyers, hired by the government, sometimes find themselves suing their boss.

It doesn't seem to bother the boss. But complaints have been heard from some members of the boss' family.

The OEO lawyers—1,800 of them compared with 2,001 in the Justice Department—work for the Neighborhood Legal Services program in 250 offices across the country. Their clients are the nation's poor, people who can't afford to retain private lawyers.

The poor went to NLS, for free, 291,000 times last year.

Of those complaints, said an OEO spokesman, 23,000 were against either the federal government or an agency of state, county or local government with which the federal government is involved.

Many of the complaints resulted in suits being filed. Such agencies as the Veterans Administration, the Social Security Administration, state welfare departments which receive federal funds, and housing authorities operated under the Federal Housing Administration were among the defendants.

OEO said it has no record of how many suits its lawyers filed against government agencies. It also said it had no breakdown on just how much all this activity cost the taxpayers, but the Neighborhood Legal Services program alone had a budget last year of $42 million. Of this, $17 million went to pay the salaries of its legal staff (an average of $9,500 per lawyer).

Some of the officials who wound up on the losing side in cases filed by NLS—including Gov. Ronald Reagan of California—complained it was not right for the government to pay lawyers to sue the government.

Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., offered an amendment last year to the Senate version of the anti-poverty bill to bar NLS from such activities. It failed to pass by 16 votes.

Neighborhood Legal Services

found an unexpected ally last week in the President's Commission on Civil Disorders.

"The legal services program administered by the Office of Economic Opportunity has made a good beginning in providing legal assistance to the poor. Its present level of effort should be substantially expanded through increased private and public funding..."

Suits against private citizens—landlords accused of charging exorbitant rents, for example—represent 92 per cent of the court actions filed by NLS, but a spokesman for the program noted "these are not our landmark cases."

"Although the proportion of suits against the government is not great, those suits tend to be the most important ones, the cases that involve law reform. And a major goal of the program is to change unjust laws."

One law which NLS has tackled—successfully so far—is the residency requirement imposed by 40 states and the District of Columbia as a qualification for welfare benefits. NLS claims the requirements, most of which are one year, violate that portion of the 14th Amendment

Selective Service Family Tradition

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Mark Campbell, 18, registered his name with the draft Monday. Selba Campbell, his mother, helped sign him in. She is chief clerk of the manpower division of the New Mexico Selective Service. Mrs. Campbell said her mother was the draft board clerk for Jack County, Tex., from 1941 to 1947.

stating: "...No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States..."

Last fall, NLS attorneys in California sued the U.S. Department of Labor after the department approved use of 8,100 Mexican farmhands for a tomato harvest in California despite federal regulations prohibiting the hiring of braceros where domestic labor is available.

NLS won a temporary injunction against use of the braceros and then dropped the suit when the Labor Department agreed to review its action and permit NLS attorneys to sit in on the review.

It was this sort of case that angered Sen. Murphy. His aides say privately that Murphy feels NLS lawyers may purposely be directing themselves toward landmark cases at the expense of the less notable cases of citizen vs. citizen.

Reluctant Actress Is Big Star

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Something for aspiring young actresses to gnash their pretty teeth over: One of the most sought after new film performers is a Swedish schoolgirl whose principal ambition is to become a U.N. interpreter.

She was picked for a film from a newspaper photograph. She made the movie with apparent ease and won the Cannes Film Festival award as best actress of the year. She turned down a starring film with Richard Burton, Marlon Brando and Ringo Starr because the subject was too risqué.

Eat your hearts out, girls.

The prodigy is Pia Degermark, barely 18 and in the full bloom of youth. She is tall with golden hair and dark eyebrows, and she curtsies when she meets an adult. She is the star of a remarkably beautiful film called "Elvira Madigan," which is doing the kind of business in this country that makes it look like the "A Man and a Woman" of 1968.

Pia was in Hollywood for the opening of "Elvira Madigan" here. She proved to be articulate and level-headed. She speaks excellent English, is adept in French, and less so in Spanish.

"I will be back in school next Monday," she explained. "I am not missing any classes because the school is out for a ski holiday. I am sorry to miss that, because I love to ski. But I am happy to see California, especially for your sun. We have had a very bad winter in Sweden."

She told how she became an actress. Swedish director Bo Widerberg was searching for a young unknown to play Elvira, a tightrope walker who ran off with a married army officer, then entered a suicide pact when their plight together seemed doomed.

Widerberg saw a photograph of Pia dancing at a charity ball with Sweden's crown prince. He asked her to star in his film.

"At first I thought he was crazy, but he kept after me," she recalled. "My mother was very much against it, but my father (a textile manufacturer) thought it might be interesting experience for me. He won her over."

Two summers ago, when she was still 16, Pia starred in "Elvira Madigan." Despite the heavy dramatics required, she found the work easy — "because we improvised a great deal and most of it was filmed outdoors." She even did her own tightrope walking and performed like an expert, except for several bruising falls.

She will finish school in May, and she is likely to appear in "The Sagull" for Sidney Lumet. She is also sought by Mel Ferrer to star in "Peter Pan." Pia, who earned $1,260 for "Elvira Madigan," now is being offered $200,000 per film.

Resolution

the same as those to be used in the general election.

A petition containing 649 signatures was presented to the Council asking for the mill tax increase for the Public Library.

Members of the Council took under advisement another ordinance presented regarding the Firemen's pension.

The ordinance contained an amendment which specifies "no employee who has drawn from the petition fund monies which had been drawn from the fund when he resigned, shall not be required to refund monies if retired, prior to Feb. 28th, 1968.

After that date, any employee who withdraws his money from the fund and then returns to work for the department will be required to refund all such monies as withdrawn.

This ordinance was drafted through a misunderstanding prior to the mentioned date, with reference to three firemen who had resigned, drew their pay, and later returned to the department with the information they did not have to refund their previous withdrawn monies, but still would qualify for retirement. Loss of time while off would not count toward retirement but previous time on the department would be credited to the retirement the same as any other fireman who had been in constant employment.

The ordinance was held up for final passage until further study and discussion could be held.

The Council approved the purchase of a used grader for the Street and Alley Department on a motion by Councilman Walter Jesse, at a cost of $7,750 with the trade-in of a smaller grader of the department.

A petition for curb and guttering for Montgomery Street from 19th to 20th Streets on both sides of the street was approved and a resolution for the project ordered drawn.

Three bids on 500 feet of two-ald-a-half-inch fire hose were turned over to the Fire and Water Committee for acceptance or rejection. The bids were from the Cash Hardware Co., on American La France hose at 77¢; one from Ralph A. Earhardt and Associates of Jefferson City at $1.80 per foot; and another for $1.28 per foot for Eureka Fire hose.

A change order on work being done at the south treatment plant was approved. It was for $6,984.41, of which $4,935.93 was eligible for matching funds. The entire cost of the project is $473,734.41.

Four bids were received for a typewriter in the office of the City Collector. Wise Typewriter Co., on two machines, one for $425, with a city discount of $42.50 and another for $345 with a trade in. From the IBM for bids, two were for $421 each with trade-in allowance of $25, and another for $616.50 and $594 with trade-in allowances of $25 each. Rotarians Hear Agent Of Treasury

Robert Stewart, Kansas City special agent with the Secret Service branch of the U. S. Treasury Department, described the activities of personnel connected with the Kansas City office when he spoke to members of the Sedalia Rotary Club on Monday noon.

While the Kansas City office is primarily concerned with the discovery and apprehension of counterfeiters, its special agents also enforce the law concerning forgeries of U. S. Treasury checks and bonds and laws relating to coin counterfeiting and changing of dates on coins to give them a spurious value.

Steward passed counterfeit five, ten and twenty dollar bills to show the poor quality of workmanship used in the printing. He stated there is no one way to discover a counterfeit bill, but some of the more noticeable flaws to look for are, lack of blue and red fibers in the paper, something less than expert craftsmanship in the reproduction of portraits on the bills and the poor quality of the scroll work.

During the past year the Kansas City Secret Service office arrested 23 counterfeiters and recovered $10,688.00 in imitation bills. Steward stated the person who accepts counterfeit money, or who accepts and cashes forged U. S. Treasury checks is the loser in such transaction, and not the government.

Ernest Otis, March program chairman, introduced the speaker. Jake Summers, president, announced a March 12th meeting of the board of directors. He urged members to make plans to attend the District Conference on April 16, 17 and 18 at Lebanon, Mo.

Charles Hofheins introduced the guests, who were, Harold Hutcheson, Warsaw Rotarian; Myron Main, with LeRoy Iuchs, and student guests Carl Bopp and Steve Schuber, of Sacred Heart High School.

Aubrey Case led in group singing with Mrs. Keith Maynard playing the piano accompaniment.

Guilty Plea By a Woman In Bank Case

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — Mrs. Bonnie Sue Wilane, 23, is the third person to plead guilty to charges arising from the $13,000 holdup of an Overland Park Bank and the slaying of a highway patrolman.

Mrs. Wilane was sentenced Monday to 10 to 21 years by District Judge Herbert W. Walton on a charge of armed robbery.

Mrs. Karen L. Goetz, 24, the fourth person charged in the crime, will have an arraignment this afternoon. She also is expected to plead guilty to armed robbery, with the state dropping five other charges.

Both women, under such action, could become eligible for parole after 16 months.

Henry Floyd Brown, 39, has pleaded guilty to seven charges, including the murder of Sgt. Eldon Miller. He is awaiting sentence.

Andrew Evan Gipson, 31, the first to plead guilty, is serving 40 to 90 years in the state prison.

Has the Railroad Industry Conned Federal Government?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The following railroad facts can bear repeating:

— For years the railroads have publicized the idea that passengers have deserted the rails and that passenger trains therefore must be dropped. Many have been dropped.

— For as many years the railroads have maintained that only by merging into larger units could some of their members survive in the midst of competitive, and sometimes subsidized, methods of moving goods. These mergers have been made.

— Railroads in recent months have been saying they must have higher prices for the goods they move. After obtaining a 3 per cent increase last fall they are expected to seek another increase this month, perhaps this week.

Many critics are of the opinion, of course, that the dropping of passenger trains, the merging of lines and the rate increases are related, and not just chronologically. This may or may not be so.

However, the sequence of these factors, real or imagined, is causing some renewed concern and criticism among interested parties as to whether the federal government, regulator of the rails, has been:

— Overwhelmed by an outpouring of evidence, testimony and plain propaganda into viewing the immediate profit-plight of the rails as more important than the long-range requirements of society.

— Conned into believing that a reduction of competition would lead to the greatest efficiency and the lowest prices in transporting goods.

— Lax in its concern for the traveling public by agreeing with the railroads that customers just don't want to use the rails — although millions of people obviously would use them if they were modernized.

The railroads' argument for rate increases generally is that they are caught in a profit squeeze. It is an old argument and often has merit. The present claim, for example, is that wages have risen and so prices must. This can be defended, especially in a period of inflation.

In the past the lines have argued that profits were damaged by growing competition from jet airplanes, superhighways and inland waterways, all of which benefit to some degree from federal funds. These arguments were generally considered to be justified.

Federal research, in fact, may have worsened the condition by concentrating on rivers, roads and air space and doing little with the rails.

And there was costly featherbedding.

In more instances than management cares to admit, however, the responses to these challenges were regressive. They raised rates while permitting service to deteriorate, thus assuring decay. Ancient equipment and ideas were applied to formidable modern problems.

The more aggressive, innovative modern management tactics and technology were not applied until considerable decay had set in, much of which is the present cause of troubles, even though the growth of the nation's economy seemed to assure the railroads of growing business.

Refuse Visa To Premier Of Rhodesia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said today it has refused a visa to Premier Ian Smith of Rhodesia, who seized independence from Great Britain in November 1965.

State Department press officer Carl Bartsch said that while the United States has issued visas to Rhodesians with valid British passports, Smith apparently doesn't have one.

"So since we don't recognize the Smith regime we don't consider a passport issued by that regime to be a valid travel document," Bartsch said.

A student group at the University of Virginia issued a speaking invitation to Smith last September and he applied for his visa last month at the U.S. consulate in Salisbury, the State Department said. Bartsch said the secretary of state and attorney general may jointly waive the requirement that a visa applicant have a valid passport "and we have granted such waivers to a few private Rhodesian citizens both white and African. Students, for example, have received such waivers."

But, he added, it is generally not the policy to waive passport requirements for the heads or leading officials of a regime the United States does not recognize, "even if they are not coming on an official visit or for official purposes."

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Mrs. Sammie Taplin has an elephant which wears red wool socks and mukluks to keep its feet warm.

Mrs. Taplin also has a problem—the elephant eats as much as two horses, weighs 1,200 pounds and is growing.

Spock-Gregory Ticket Assured

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Negro comedian Dick Gregory and baby doctor Benjamin Spock will be presidential and vice presidential candidates on the November ballot in Pennsylvania, a spokesman for the proposed Peace & Freedom party said Monday.

Melvin Metelits of Philadelphia, a coordinator of a campaign to petition for the ballot spots, said some 15,000 signatures have been collected and will be submitted to the State Elections Bureau by the deadline at 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Under a formula established by state law, a party needs 10,551 signatures to get candidates on the ballot this election year.

LBJ Plea On Copper Walkout

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson reportedly has urged union leaders to put aside at least temporarily their demands for companywide bargaining, a major roadblock to settlement of the nation's copper strike.

A copper industry source reported Monday, following Johnson's initiation of round-the-clock Washington talks between representatives of 26 unions and four major producers, that the President pressed negotiators to concentrate first on economic issues.

Johnson, the source said, "suggested if bargaining was successful on economic issues the other issues might fall into place."

Johnson said the strike has cost copper workers $250 million in wages and the companies $123 million in after-tax profits.

The four major producers involved in the 235-day-old strike—Kennecott, Anaconda, Phelps Dodge and American Smelting and Refining—have declined even to discuss the company-wide bargaining issue.

The unions representing some 50,000 striking workers want to make each company deal simultaneously with all unions representing its workers at all its facilities, with a common expiration date for all union contracts.

Anaconda filed unfair labor practice charges meanwhile against the United Steelworkers and a large group of other Montana unions over the company-wide bargaining issue.

The complaint was filed Monday with the National Labor Relations Board in Seattle, Wash. The NLRB last week obtained a U.S. federal court restraining order in Denver against the unions after a similar complaint by Kennecott.

Anaconda contends only wages, hours and working conditions are mandatory bargaining points under federal law. It says the unions refused to bargain on other points until its companywide contract demands were met.

people in the ghetto feel it's a white press."

The first workshop was held about a year ago in San Diego for newsmen in that area. Others were held at Michigan State University, Hartford, Conn., and Columbia University.

Four are planned for this spring at Omaha, Neb., Syracuse, N.Y., Los Angeles and Houston, Tex.

About half a dozen other workshops are under consideration.

The official colors of the University of Missouri, St. Louis are red and gold. Athletic teams on the UMSL campus are known as the "Rivermen."

Racial Workshops Held

By STEPHEN M. AUGH

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's Community Relations Service has been holding race-relations workshops for newsmen throughout the country and several more are planned this spring.

A spokesman discussed the project Monday after the President's Commission on Civil Disorders recommended last week that the news media seek a goal of integration both in its news presentation and in its personnel.

The commission said the news media have not reported adequately on the causes and consequences of civil disorders and the underlying problems of race relations.

For its workshop sessions, which last two or three days, the Community Relations Service has been gathering together newsmen, Negro slum residents and the service's field workers to discuss community race problems.

A principal aim, the service's spokesman said, is to change the image many Negroes have of the news media as a "white press."

He said the service opposes bringing top-management news people into the workshop sessions.

"We need the day-to-day working press, the assignment editors, make-up editors, reporters," he said.

He added: "We try not to treat these as conferences that are going to concentrate on riots, violence and that sort of thing. Generally speaking, the press has met the challenge in handling race riots—it's not in this area they've had the difficulty in handling the race trouble."

"The mere fact that there is a riot sometimes is in part a reflection that the media hasn't done its job well. To too many

No Deal With South By GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-four Republican senators from states with 638 delegate votes have charted a course toward rejection of any "Southern strategy" civil rights plank by the GOP National Convention.

Led by GOP Leader Everett M. Dirksen, the 24 supplied the margin Monday by which the Senate clamped debate-limiting cloture on a pending civil rights bill by a 65-32 count—the bare majority needed.

This vote appeared to guarantee eventual passage of a bill carrying an open-housing provision giving Negroes more encouragement to move into the vote-packed white suburbs. Republican candidates count heavily on suburban support to offset the Democratic big-city strongholds.

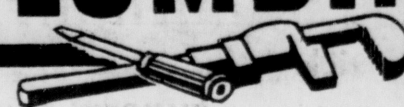

If the 24 senators from as many states are reading the sentiment at home correctly—and there were divisions of opinion in three of the states—delegations representing nearly half of the 1,333 Miami Beach, Fla., convention votes are in no mood for a civil rights compromise with the deep South.

This does not take into account delegations from states which have no GOP senators but which are likely to support a strong civil rights declaration. These include Connecticut, Maryland, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio, Washington and Wisconsin, which will have a total of 204 convention votes.

The third-party threat of former Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama already has all but wiped out any hopes for major Republican inroads in the South this year.

By their actions, the Republican senators are cautioning their party colleagues—and the GOP's eventual presidential candidate—against contesting with Wallace for suburban hold-outs against integration.

Redistricting Headache

Missouri legislators and congressional candidates can put away their smelling salts and aspirin for awhile.

The squabble over the 1967 congressional redistricting plan, nullified by a three-judge court in Kansas City, is temporarily abated following the United States Supreme Court's agreement to examine the controversial plan.

The Missouri General Assembly and the candidates are somewhat relieved of the jumping jitters because the high court also authorized the state to conduct elections this year under the challenged arrangement.

Since the 1967 redistricting plan is allowed to stand this year, no further effort will be made by the General Assembly to devise a new plan to conform to the order of the Kansas City district court which had held the 1967 arrangement had too many population variances.

Attorney General Norman H. Anderson declared in his objection to the lower court ruling that common sense dictates minor variances be permitted in efforts to effect perfectly equal districts in terms of population.

If the guidelines of the court suggest basing redistricting on population figures, where do we get them—from the 1960 Census? These are as out-of-date as high button shoes because the Census Bureau itself has estimated that the country's population has increased over 18,000,000 since 1960. If Missouri went up or down in relation to these figures, it still makes the 1960 figures unrealistic when applied to rearranged congressional districts. When you are dealing with estimates you are still guessing. Equitable representation by estimate is impossible of attainment and no judge or anyone else is going to meet perfection standards by this method.

Now that the U. S. Supreme Court is going to examine the 1967 plan, and moreover, let it stand for this year's election, some of the common sense that Mr. Anderson pleaded for is coming out from behind the controversial bushes.

We would like to suggest that if the Supreme Court has determined Missouri can live with the minor variances in the 1967 plan during the elections this year, why not permit Missourians to live with it until after the 1970 Census authenticates realistic population figures, rather than using estimates.

What's the sense of developing a new redistricting plan in 1969? A year later it would probably not conform to 1970 population figures which will not be available in time for application to the August primaries of that year. Then the whole thing would have to be unscrambled again in 1971.

Making excessively fine or trivial distinctions in reasoning on the current subject of congressional redistricting places the whole cabodde in the category of hair-splitting.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Romney Balks as Stalking Horse

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — The real reason George Romney abruptly retrieved his hat from the presidential ring, according to his closest confidants, was the discovery that Nelson Rockefeller was using him.

The Michigan governor, who places a high premium on personal honor, told confidants fiercely that he did not intend to become a stalking horse for Rockefeller.

Romney's decision, no doubt, was also influenced by his poor showing in the New Hampshire polls. However, it is against his nature to quit, and he had resolved earlier to continue his fight for the Republican nomination no matter what the New Hampshire outcome.

He had been given what he felt was Rockefeller's "sacred pledge" to support him up to the final vote at the GOP convention. Evidence that Rockefeller couldn't keep this "sacred pledge" — more than the discouraging news from New Hampshire — led to Romney's withdrawal.

From the first, Romney had offered to abandon his own personal ambition and back Rockefeller if the latter wanted to run. Both had agreed that the moderates must unite behind a single candidate or risk a conservative takeover of the party again, as in 1964.

Rockefeller insisted that he had been emotionally drained of any desire to become president. Once his wife Happy interjected: "We're not going down that road again." She referred to Rockefeller's experience at the 1964 convention when he faced a hall full of hostile, howling, conservative delegates who booed, hissed and yelled obscenities at him. Some had leaped on their chairs, angrily waving dollar bills when he tried to speak.

The subject of Romney's pullout came up again during the conference cruise last fall on the SS Independence. Three times on shipboard Romney cited his decline in the polls and offered to withdraw in Rockefeller's favor. But Rockefeller persuaded Romney to stay in the race, promising to fight for him until the last vote was counted at the Republican convention. Rockefeller also promised to line up his backers, Gov. Spiro Agnew of Maryland and his brother, Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas, behind the Romney candidacy.

—Rocky for Rocky?—

Reports began to leak back to Romney, however, that Rockefeller was quietly assessing his own convention strength. In one confidential conversation, Rockefeller told a trusted adviser that he thought eleven of the Republican governors would support him for the nomination.

Rockefeller's recent statement in Detroit that he would accept a draft was the last straw. Romney interpreted this to mean that Rockefeller couldn't keep the pledge to support him to the end. Romney

Taxpayers Ask IRS

Q — Is it true you can now deduct one-half of your medical insurance premiums even if you don't itemize your deductions?

A — No, that is not the way this new provision works. One-half of the premiums paid for medical insurance up to a maximum of $150 may now be deducted without regard to the 3 per cent of income limitation on medical expenses, but only when the taxpayer itemizes his deductions. The balance is included with other medical expenses subject to the 3 per cent rule.

Previously, the entire amount of these insurance premiums had to be included with the taxpayer's other medical expenses and only the amount of the total in excess of 3 per cent of income could be deducted.

Latin America Red Threat Ebbs; Other Crises Abound

By BRUCE BISSAT
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Fidel Castro's ambitious campaign to subvert established governments in Latin America is at a low ebb of effectiveness. But this could be only a temporary stroke of luck for an America and a free world eager to avoid other Vietnams around the globe.

Communist guerrillas in Bolivia, always a small force, are today in scattered disarray. In Venezuela, a progressive land where they nevertheless were able to mount serious terroristic attacks over a long span, the Red rebels are estimated to number no more than 40 and are rated merely a nuisance.

Yet, while the direct threat has faded almost to a shadow, the long-range peril remains great. The reason is elemental. Generally speaking, Latin-American countries are losing crucial ground in the fight to feed their burgeoning millions of people.

Food production per capita is lower today than before World War II—and is still dropping. Except in Argentina and one or two other places, it never was adequate.

Even with a stable population, this would be bad news. It is catastrophic for the continent with the fastest-growing population in the world. The present population of 215 million is expected to soar to around 625 million within 30 years.

Increasingly necessary imports of food by Latin lands cut deeply into the region's precious, dwindling supplies of foreign exchange. Those supplies are down because, as has been already well-remarked, shrinking markets for Latin raw materials have reduced the area's share of world trade.

The rising difficulties over food add new danger to an economic condition that has been continuously bad for a long time. Poverty rides South America like a pestilence. With the U.S. citizen enjoying an annual per capita income of more than $3,000, it is staggering to read such sample Latin-American per capita figures as $128 for Bolivia, $175 for Paraguay, $181 for Guatemala.

To help break the grip of grinding poverty, the United States conceived the Alliance for Progress, a program linking economic aid with an insistence upon reforms in land, taxes, etc.

Most of the proposed reforms were never undertaken. The Alliance only here and there has had any really noticeable effect in stimulating Latin America's economic growth—which has been critically slow when measured against the need.

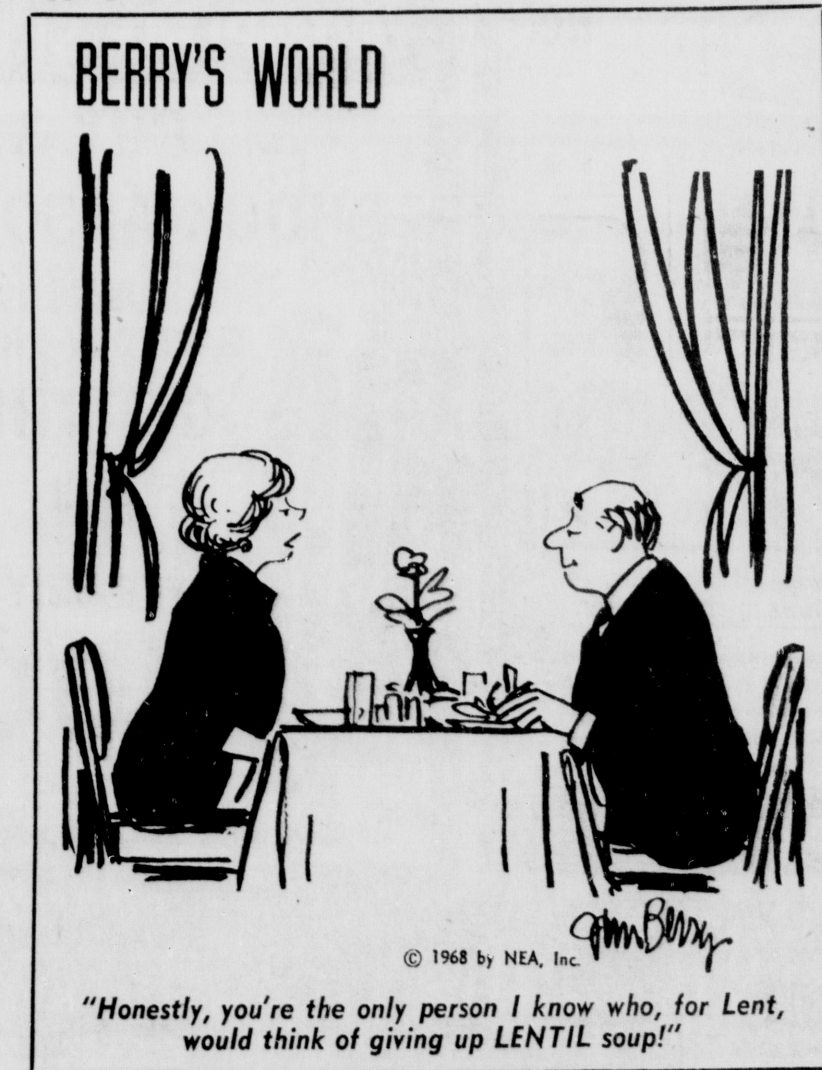

Moreover, funds available to the Alliance have dropped nearly $170 million, figured on an annual basis, since the high point of nearly $640 million in 1966.

Set against this discouraging evidence of a gravely inadequate effort is the steadily swelling popular pressure for something better—not only for more food and other economic necessities but for more education and more of the higher opportunity that goes with it.

The educational prospect for Latin people is still severely restricted in most countries. For the most part they have not even conquered illiteracy. The literacy rate is good—90 per cent—in Chile and Venezuela—but it is at such pitifully low levels as 37 per cent in Bolivia and 28 per cent in Guatemala.

The free world may take some legitimate comfort from the fact that Latin peoples have spurned the first efforts of Castro and other Reds to convert their economic and social grievances into a fueling engine for para-military warfare on the Vietnam pattern.

But if Castro and like types have lost the opening round of battles, they have not yet lost the war. And the free world's nonmilitary defenses for the troubled Latin region seem to be slipping lower and lower.

The minor expert was holding forth in the post rubber game gathering. It had taken him some time to get the floor, but eventually he was telling about what his bad partner had done to him on the hand shown in the box.

"Our opponents were vulnerable with 60 on score, and I decided not to give up after my partner passed and South opened with one spade. My partner bid two no-trump over North's two spades, and South closed the bidding with three spades. All suit leads looked unattractive, so I opened my duce of trumps. As you can see, this cost a trump trick, but we still should have beaten the hand. Here's what happened to me:

"South took my partner's queen with the ace, entered dummy with the ace of clubs and led a spade. My partner took his king and got out with the four of hearts. South played low. I won with the 10 and led back the deuce to put South in. He drew my partner's last trump and led a club. I played my 10 but my partner was not going to let me be end-played. He overtook with the king and led a low diamond. South played low and I had to go up with the king, whereupon South spread his hand and claimed the balance."

All the assorted listeners, with the exception of the one major expert in the group, sympathized as expected but the major expert had a few words of dissent. Here they are:

"Your partner's decision to bid two no-trump instead of three hearts was a bad one and left you a tough lead problem, so I can't blame you for your opening lead, but I do claim that you chucked the hand."

"How, by the ghost of Culbertson?"

"When you were in with the 10 of hearts, you should have led the king back. Then, your partner would never have gone wrong."

The World Today
Vietnam Build-up Boosts Tax Case

By JOSEPH R. COYNE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's 10 per cent income tax surcharge proposal, now seven months old, has remained virtually motionless since its unveiling last Aug. 3. But it's still very much alive.

There are fresh signs the tax hike will win new attention in the coming weeks, especially in view of the current reappraisal of U.S. troop strength in Vietnam.

It costs as much as $40,000 to send a man to Vietnam and maintain him there for a year. So any troop escalation of 50,000 to 100,000 men could cost as much as $2 billion to $4 billion.

Administration officials have never abandoned hope for the surcharge even when it was shelved temporarily for the third time by the House Ways and Means Committee earlier this year.

And some officials appear more hopeful than at any time since last fall that the surcharge will become law before long.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler, one of the architects of the surcharge, is expected to make a new appeal for the tax when he testifies Wednesday before the Senate Finance Committee.

Although the committee is primarily considering a House-passed bill to prevent the auto and telephone excise tax rates from dropping on April 1, it will be Fowler's first chance this year to appeal for the surcharge in a formal meeting with the Senate group.

An optimist when it comes to the surcharge's chances in Congress, Fowler pointed out in a recent interview that it took more than a year to win final approval of the last two tax cuts.

There are reports that any escalation of troop strength in Vietnam might prompt the administration to propose a surcharge even higher than 10 per cent.

Some of Fowler's optimism probably springs from a statement by Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee, who last week said a substantial acceleration of the Vietnam war could force Congress to enact higher taxes.

Mills cautioned that cutbacks elsewhere in the federal budget would also be essential.

When Johnson last January submitted his $186.1 billion budget to Congress for the next fiscal year he asked for the surcharge to take effect April 1 for individuals and retroactive to Jan. 1 for corporations.

This timetable now appears out of the question since not even the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee has acted on the proposal, much less the House itself and the Senate.

But an attempt is expected in the Senate to tack a surcharge to the excise tax bill.

Sen. John J. Williams of Delaware, senior Republican Finance Committee member, intends to force a vote on the surcharge in both the committee and on the Senate floor. He would couple it with strict limits on federal spending, hiring and construction.

There are some rumblings within the administration that the major arguments for the surcharge should have been pegged to the war and to reducing the deficit, rather than placing great emphasis on economic factors.

But government officials say some of the very economic consequences the surcharge was designed to prevent are now hitting the nation—increased inflation and surging imports which have deteriorated the country's trade balance and hurt the balance of payments.

Sen. John J. Williams of Delaware, senior Republican Finance Committee member, intends to force a vote on the surcharge in both the committee and on the Senate floor. He would couple it with strict limits on federal spending, hiring and construction.

Betty Canary Birthdays

I think the best thing about March being here is that it means February is over. February is great for teachers because they keep busy cutting out Lincoln's profile and drawing hatchets and coloring cherries and exchanging valentines.

It isn't so terrific for mothers as this is when children bring home those mean little vile-colored candy hearts and stick them all over the furniture.

It is an especially bad month at our house because, along with the other holidays, we have two birthdays during the month and I am a complete coward when it comes to giving parties. Every year Stu has asked, "Why can't I have a birthday party?" and I answer, "Because we just had a party for Rick and everyone will think we are greedy for presents," which is so patent a lie that it gets no answer from him. Everybody knows Rick's party was eight years ago. This year I signed what I thought was a report card but what turned out to be a promise for a party. Stu had a patriotic theme with red and blue crepe paper which fades onto the walls.

Actually, a party for 12-year-old boys is no problem if you take the furniture to the garage, remove chandeliers, have lots of food and get the games and prizes over quickly so the guests may retire to the basement to throw darts and knock each other into the laundry tubs.

Giving a party for a son automatically cancels any excuse you might have thought up for refusing a daughter a birthday party. This will be a piece of cake, you think, and amid visions of sweet little girls with hair ribbons and fluffy dresses, you plan musical chairs and pink and yellow crepe paper which fades onto the walls.

Half the guests arrive wearing corduroy slacks and sweatshirts and yelling "Let's play kick the can!" The others wear skirts, sweaters and mesh hose and keep screaming "Where are the BOYS? Didn't you ask any BOYS?"

Then there is always little Helen who wears a mint-green shift and white gloves (which she never removes—not even when eating her ice cream.) "I got a GOLD charm bracelet for my birthday!" she says. "MY mother says organdy dresses are VULGAR," she says to your daughter, who is wearing an organdy dress and a silver charm bracelet. "MY mother says slacks are COMMON," she says. (This is where you decide they MAY play kick the can.) "MY mother LOATHES strawberry ice cream!" she says. "Are THOSE the presents?" Is THAT the cake?

At least a mother can count on three things after a birthday party. The guests will say, "ThankyouverymuchhadAnicetime." Your child will say, "Can I have a party next year?" And, YOU will say, "Over my dead body!"

Williams' Last-Second Tip Ends Big Eight Race

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Long-armed Gene Williams leaped high for a spectacular left-handed tip-in with three seconds on the clock—and suddenly Kansas State was NCAA tourney-bound, with the madcap Big Eight basketball race over. "It was a great one—the prettiest I've ever seen," said Coach Tex Winter of the goal which lifted his club past Iowa State 63-61 at Ames, Iowa, Monday night. "I'm not thinking of the

Kansas State And Iowa Have to Wait

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Kansas State and Iowa, now assured of first-place ties in their respective conferences, must wait until Saturday to do something about clinching titles. But Columbia and Princeton will settle that problem tonight.

Eighth-ranked Columbia and Princeton will play off for the Ivy League championship at neutral St. John's Alumni Hall in New York. Princeton forced the playoff by beating Columbia last Saturday night in the final regular-season game.

Columbia is 20-4 and Princeton 20-5 over-all. Each is 12-2 in the Ivy.

Kansas State clinched a share of the Big Eight Conference championship Monday night when Gene Williams tipped in a shot with five seconds left for a 63-61 victory over Iowa State at Ames, Iowa.

This gave the Wildcats a 10-3 conference mark and kept them one game ahead of Kansas, which edged Oklahoma 85-80 at Norman, Okla. Kansas State is at home against Oklahoma State in its final regular-season game Saturday while Kansas plays at Iowa State.

Kansas State, however, is assured of an NCAA berth. The worst K-State can do is tie Kansas for the title, and K-State beat Kansas twice in their home-and-home series. This would determine the champion in the event of a tie, and no playoff would be necessary.

Sam Williams broke the game wide opening by scoring eight points within 58 seconds midway through the second half as Iowa clinched a Big Ten tie by trouncing Minnesota 91-72 at Minneapolis.

Iowa, now 10-3 in the conference, needs to beat Michigan in its regular-season finale at Iowa City Saturday to wrap up the title. Ohio State, in second place a game back, closed its regular season on the road Monday night by nipping Illinois 67-64.

Top-ranked Houston and No. 9 Louisville, the only two members of The Associated Press Top Ten to see action, both closed out their regular seasons with easy victory.

Houston, 28-0, smashed West Texas State 107-76 at Canyon, Tex., as Player of the Year Elvin Hayes poured in 39 points and grabbed 27 rebounds.

All-American Westley Unseld scored 30 points and cleared 23 rebounds as Louisville, 20-6 and the Missouri Valley champion, romped 107-58 over Bellarmine at home.

In other games, Vanderbilt thrashed Louisiana State 115-86, Tulane topped Virginia Tech 88-78, Utah State edged Portland 71-69 and Seattle whipped Texas El-Paso 67-51 in home-court triumphs.

Louisiana State's All-American Pete Maravich scored 42 points and became the greatest scoring sophomore, with 1,138. Only one major-college player has scored more in one season—Frank Selvy of Furman with 1,209 in 1954. Maravich's 43.8-point per game average is a record.

NCAA right now—we have to beat Oklahoma State Saturday for an outright title," Winter said.

K-State fans are thinking of the NCAA, however, and they plan to give the Wildcats a thunderous welcome home today at Ahearn Fieldhouse.

It was the fifth straight Big Eight victory for the streaking Wildcats and assured them of at least a co-championship at 10-3.

Kansas is 9-4 after a wild 85-80 overtime victory at Oklahoma and could share the crown with K-State by beating Iowa State at Lawrence Saturday, should K-State stumble at home against OSU.

But K-State wins the NCAA trip because it beat Kansas twice. Kansas likely would net a bid to the NIT in New York by winning.

Down by seven at 54-47 with 8:05 left, Iowa State fought back to a tie at 61-all with 1:09 left. Then K-State set up a final shot by Steve Honeycutt, which just missed, but Williams leaped high above 6-6 Bill Cain.

The 6-7 Williams, who has a 9-foot reach with arms two inches longer than 7-1 Nick Pino's, was the hero of this game. He grabbed 16 rebounds, blocked three Iowa State shots the last half and scored 13.

K-State's drive toward Winter's eighth championship in 15 years at Manhattan actually started a month ago—when the future looked gloomy.

Winter lost Louie Small, a 203-point scorer, and Wheeler Hughes, his seventh man, because of low grades. It proved a blessing in disguise, as K-State's big men had to come through and did. K-State has gone 8-1 since then, losing only at Nebraska.

The overlooked man, however, is Jeff Webb, 6-4 sophomore who made his first start five games ago because of his ball-handling and play-making. Even Winter is surprised at his 11.0 scoring mark in the five games.

It was Don Smith night at Ames and after scoring 24 points he told the crowd "I'm sorry we couldn't do it." Both Iowa State and Nebraska are 8-5.

Kansas got 30 points from Phil Harmon and top games from Roger Bohnenstiel and Dave Nash. But it was Jo Jo White who threw in a 20-foot goal to start the overtime, then stole the ball and fed for a 79-75 lead. Don Sidle led Oklahoma with 24. OU now stands 7-6.

Missouri staged a remarkable rally at Oklahoma State, wiping out a 54-43 deficit with 3:53 left to win 60-58. Mizzou now stands 4-9, with OSU and Colorado both 3-10. Don Tomlinson and Gene Jones led MU with 16 each.

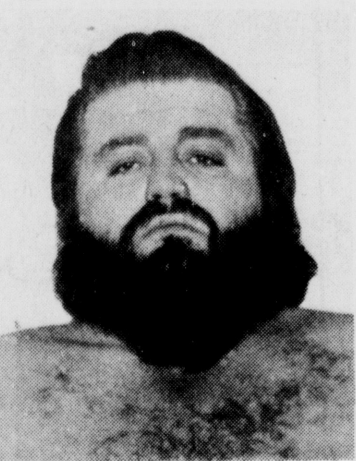

Family Affair

Pitcher Don Drysdale gets a playful poke from his daughter, Kelly, while his wife watches. Drysdale was elected to represent the National League in the 1968 All-Star game at Anaheim, where he was the winning pitcher. Don tied Dazzy Vance with 190 wins last season. Does Drysdale think he has a chance to win 380 games? "Forget it," he cracked. (UPI)

Etchison, Klondike Bill Bid For Tag Team Title

Bob Geigel.

Klondike Bill

Ronnie Etchison and Klondike Bill, who are laying claim to the unofficial North American tag team championship, will make a bid for the real thing when they swing into action at Convention Hall tonight.

Veteran Etchison and his 347-pound partner will challenge longtime titleholders Bob Geigel and Bob Brown in the best-of-three falls event which will have a 60-minute limit.

Etchison and Bill make up the only duo to have gained a team edge over the champions. In subsequent action, however, Geigel and Brown got the decision despite a protest by Etchison that Geigel had used a metal object on him in gaining the final and deciding fall.

"He can think that all he wants," remarked Geigel. "He's just hot because we won our title back."

Working tonight's feature will be two referees, a fact that figures to keep Geigel and Brown closer in harmony with the rules and something that should prevent any use of foreign objects by either side.

Both the previous matches between the tandems were held in Kansas City. Matchmaker Gust Karras moved the "rubber" event here to give Sedalia fans an opportunity to see the free-swinging units in action.

Matched in tonight's semifinals are Steve Bolas and Natureboy Rogers Kirby, both high on the list of the area's most talented heavyweights.

Also set are matches between Bobby Shane and Ripper Daniels, Geigel and Etchison.

Study Report On Lost Cash From Big Fund

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The federal government and the state attorney general's office are looking into a report from an advertising firm, soliciting funds for the Olympic Committee in a five-state area, that $72,000 is missing.

Assistant U. S. Atty. Tim Timmins said officials of Dodson and Co. told him an ex-employee had diverted the funds.

Timmins added that U. S. Post Office Department inspectors were checking on whether there had been mail fraud or if there was an interstate violation that could bring the shortage under the aegis of the federal government.

A spokesman for Dodson and Co. said Texas Atty. Gen. Crawford Martin had been asked to investigate and Martin said he had sent an investigator to Dallas at the request of the Olympic Committee in New York.

The spokesman said that the amount of money involved was approximately $72,000, that it was covered by insurance and that it was believed it would be recovered.

NEW YORK (AP) — The punch that regained the world middleweight championship for Nino Benvenuti was a left cross, "my best punch," as he put it. The punch floored Emile Griffith for an automatic eighth count in the ninth round and was a major factor in Benvenuti gaining a close, but unanimous 15-round decision Monday night.

Griffith, who now has lost twice to Benvenuti in their three title fights, conceded it was an authentic knockdown "not a shove like in our first fight," but said it was a right that floored him.

Told that a replay of the punch on a TNT Communications monitor at ringside showed it was a left, Griffith smiled.

"Well, it might have been a left that put me down, but the right had a little zing to it, too." Griffith thought he had saved his title in the last round when he staggered Benvenuti and drove him across the ring with just one minute left on the clock.

That earned Griffith the last round on all three official scorecards, but it wasn't enough.

The new champion kept reporters waiting outside his dressing room door for 45 minutes, but then he laughed when asked if Griffith had hurt him in the last round.

"No, no. He didn't hurt me. I as just surprised that he had so much stuff left."

Nino himself seemed tired when he was rushed past the waiting reporters and ordered "don't let anyone in."

When they finally were admitted Benvenuti was seated on a table alongside his pretty wife, Giuliana. She kept silent while Nino answered questions.

"Nothing wrong with my ribs tonight," he replied to one question. Last September, when he lost the title to Griffith in outdoor Shea Stadium, Nino said his ribs had been hurt in an earlier round.

What about another title bout with Griffith?

"I can't say now," Nino replied. "I'm going on a brief vacation with my wife." He smiled at her and leaning over, gave her a kiss.

"We plan to return to our home in Italy in a week. Then we can talk about a rematch."

Gil Clancy, Griffith's manager, said he thought Nino "won a few rounds with last-minute flurries that looked impressive." As for a fourth title bout between Nino and Emile, Clancy declared, "I think the fight tonight calls for one."

Lewis Is Voted Coach Of The Year

HOUSTON (AP) — Guy Lewis, college basketball's coach of the year, is a fidgety man who twists towels and drinks at least 20 cups of water during every game.

As usual, two soft drink cases holding 48 paper cups of water were at Lewis' feet Monday night as his University of Houston Cougars completed their regular season schedule with a 28-0 record by defeating West Texas State, 107-76, at Canyon.

Just two hours before the tip-off Lewis had won The Associated Press coach of the year award in run-away fashion. With 322 sports writers and broadcasters voting, Lewis collected 122 votes to 34 for John Wooden of UCLA, the 1966-67 season winner.

Lewis' award came just three days after Elvin Hayes, the pace setter for the high scoring Cougars, captured the player of the year award with a landslide victory over UCLA's Lew Alcindor.

Houston had held the No. 1 national ranking since snapping UCLA's 47-game winning streak Jan. 20 with a 71-69 victory before a record crowd of 52,693 in the Astrodome.

Both Lewis and Hayes say their honors belong to the team and they agree the UCLA victory may have turned a good ball team into a great one.

"They were confident before that game and when it was over they just oozed with confidence," Lewis said.

"Since the UCLA game we've worked better for the good shot," Lewis said. "I've thought we had good team play since the first of the season but since the UCLA game it has been the best I've ever seen on a college team, particularly for desire and an ability to give the ball to the open man."

Lewis, who will be 46 on March 19, was Houston's first great athlete. He was co-captain of the school's first two basketball teams and both of them reached the NAIA playoffs in Kansas City.

Commercial Rust Remover Vs. Home Remedy Methods

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Marge wanted to know how to remove rust stains from white crocheted doilies. There is a commercial rust remover for fabrics but I also have several home remedies. One is to moisten the stain with an oxalic acid solution—one tablespoon of oxalic crystals in a cup of warm water. Rinse thoroughly.

(Polly's note—A five per cent solution can be bought at the drugstore but it is poison, so handle carefully. Soak 15 minutes and be sure to rinse at least three times. A few drops of household ammonia could even be added to the last rinse water.)

The cream of tartar method is safe for fabrics. Boil the stained article in a mixture of four teaspoons of cream of tartar to each pint of water. Boil until the stain is removed and then rinse thoroughly.

Then there is the widely used lemon juice method, where the stained portion is spread over a pan of boiling water and lemon juice squeezed on the stains. Salt may also be sprinkled on the stain, then squeeze on the lemon juice and lay the piece in the sun to dry. Rinse thoroughly and repeat if necessary. A commercial color remover can also be used in the removal of rust stains from white fabrics.—EILEEN

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I used carbon paper to transfer the pattern onto a quilt and now the carbon marks show on my finished quilt. How can they be removed without washing the quilt?—MRS. W. L. M.

DEAR POLLY—After surgery one often finds it very hard to turn over in bed. I have found that if the bottom sheet is dusted with talcum powder you can more easily turn over and slide on the talcum, and there is less strain on the incision. This helped me so much that my doctor said I healed surprisingly fast and well. Even at home I still put the talcum on my own bed and aside from the coolness and safety it smells so much nicer than that typical sick-room smell. The hospital nurses said they will use my hint on patients who find it hard to turn in bed. The doctor explained it is because perspiration is absorbed so there is no friction from the sheets.—MRS. T.

DEAR READERS—I am sure none of you would be so foolish as to try to turn over in bed until the doctor says it is safe.—POLLY

Benvenuti, Frazier Rule Respective Boxing Worlds

NEW YORK (AP) — Nino Benvenuti is once again mid-dewlight champion of the world and Joe Frazier rules as heavyweight king of at least part of it today after a record-setting boxing doubleheader at Madison Square Garden.

A crowd of 18,096 paid $683,503, an indoor fight gate record, to watch the stylish Benvenuti outlast Emile Griffith for a unanimous decision and Frazier stalk and pound blubbery Buster Mathis into submission in the 11th round.

Frazier, fighting for recognition by New York, Massachusetts, Maine, and Illinois as heavyweight champ, wore Mathis down with punishing body blows before finally dropping the big guy from Grand Rapids, Mich., with a short, stiff left hook in the 11th.

Mathis, his white trunks covered with blood, fell into the ropes heavily. He stumbled to his feet at the count of nine but Referee Arthur Mercante stopped the fight. The time was 2:33.

"This ought to prove who owns who," a jubilant Frazier shouted in his dressing room. Joe, who won the Olympic heavyweight title in 1964, twice lost to Mathis as an amateur. The defeats were the only blemishes on his record.

Frazier, the one-time butcher boy from Philadelphia, bloodied Mathis' nose in the third round, and then concentrated on the big guy's body in the middle rounds.

The stiff body punches tore into Buster's ample mid-section and took the steam out of the 243½ pound Mathis' fast start.

Yancy Durham, Frazier's manager, had advised the 24-year-old slugger to work on Mathis' body. "Beat him around the belly," Durham had told Frazier, "and he'll eventually give up."

So Joe, giving up 39 pounds to Mathis, pounded away and from the sixth round on it seemed obvious he was in complete control.

Mathis, badly shaken by the defeat, said he was stunned at losing the way he did.

"I thought I was ahead," he said, "then I pulled back from a left hook and got tagged."

Jimmy Iselin, wealthy young head of Peers, Inc., which has managed Mathis' career, said that if Buster continued fighting, it would be against tougher opponents.

Frazier went into the bout a 2-1 favorite, mostly because he had faced tougher opponents in his 19-fight career than Buster.

"Maybe we took this fight too soon," said Iselin, "I don't know."

Frazier was undaunted by the limited recognition of only four states and the pre-fight picket lines thrown up by supporters of Cassius Clay. The pickets carried signs claiming Clay still was heavyweight champion. Cassius was stripped of his title by several boxing commissions for refusing to serve in the Armed Forces.

Asked if he felt like the world champion, Frazier became annoyed.

"What do you think, man?" he snapped. "What do you think I was fighting for out there?"

Benvenuti, who beat Griffith for the second time, decked Emile in the ninth round with a left hook that turned the mid-dewlight fight around.

Both boxers lunged into each other in the opening minute of the round and Benvenuti's left crunched into Griffith's jaw. Emile sagged and Nino pumped a right that sent him to the canvas.

"The guy hit me," said Griffith, "there's no doubt about that." Emile spun across the ring and landed on the seat of his pants with a stunned look on his face.

"I was thinking clearly," said Emile. "I even helped the referee with the count." Griffith rose at three and took the mandatory eight. He backtracked the rest of the round, weather-

Mahovich Trade Ends In Uproar

TORONTO (AP) — The switchboard at Maple Leaf Gardens was flooded with angry calls. Outside on the sidewalk, a stunned crowd milled around in confusion. On the local stock exchange, shares of the Garden corporation lost $1.

Frank Mahovich had been traded.

The veteran left winger—for whom the Maple Leafs had once refused $1 million—went to the Detroit Red Wings Monday in an eight-player deal that aroused indignation throughout Toronto.

A switchboard operator at the Garden said most of the callers were "indignant and some were quite emotional. Many tried to find out who they can write letters of protest to."

San Obadiak of the Leafs' publicity department said most of the callers were "housewives who were stunned at the announcement. There are people milling around on the sidewalk outside of the Garden who want to come in and protest. But only a few have dropped in so far."

Mahovich, 30, scored 48 goals during the 1960-61 season, and has 296 in his 11-year career, a club record. He has 19 this season, but missed five weeks because of a nervous breakdown.

Six years ago, the Chicago Black Hawks offered the Leafs $1 million for Mahovich at a late-night cocktail party and the following day, Tommy Ivan of Chicago showed up with a certified check for the amount.

The deal was finally cancelled after a storm of protest from fans similar to the one triggered by the trade Monday.

ing Benvenuti's attempt to end it.

Now Nino, who weighed 160 to Emile's 154½, took control and for the next few rounds he made up an early deficit. Then, with Griffith unleashing a furious closing flurry, Nino counter-punched effectively and gained the decision.

As the decision was announced, bands of Benvenuti's countrymen rushed into the ring, waving the green, red and white Italian flag. Throughout the fight they had filled the Garden with chants of "Neeno, Neeno, Neeno."

Benvenuti, who first beat Griffith for the middleweight crown last April 17, then lost a rematch to the New Yorker Sept. 29, left the door open for a fourth meeting.

"I can't say," he told newsmen. "I won't decide about a rematch until later."

Nino got $80,000, Mathis $75,000, and Griffith and Frazier $175,000 each. The gate broke the indoor record of $511,000 set by the third Floyd Patterson-Ingermar Johansson heavyweight title fight at Miami Beach's Convention Hall March 13, 1961.

Rockhurst, Drury In Tourney Bid

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Rockhurst and Drury, 1-1 in their NAIA District 16 basketball playoff, will decide tonight which one advances to the national tournament in Kansas City next week.

Rockhurst won the first game 82-76 in Kansas City last Saturday. Then Drury beat the Hawks 70-60 Monday night on the Drury court.

Drury broke a 15-15 tie and outscored the Hawks 18-4 in the next eight minutes to take command and keep it. The halftime score was 34-22.

Rockhurst tried a zone defense, but Drury rattled it with long shots. Then the Hawks went to a man-for-man, and finally, in the last half, a desperate full-court press.

They kept the lid on Drury's Fredrick brothers fairly well. Gail Fredrick got 13 points and Virgil only 8, but that left Steve Hutchinson free to pot 21 and Tom Bollinger 15.

Jim Healey, who sat out six minutes in foul trouble, led the Hawks with 18. Abandoning the zone defense which cost so heavily at Kansas City, Drury played man-for-man and handcuffed Carl Cook with one field goal and six free throws. Cook hit 23 points at Kansas City.

Drury grabbed 34 rebounds, Rockhurst 29. The Panthers sank 22 of 43 field shots for 51 per cent, Rockhurst 21 of 48 for 44 per cent.

Frustration Helped Joe Down Mathis

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Frazier indicated there was four years of frustration behind the left hook that finished huge Buster Mathis and made the unbeaten Philadelphia heavyweight champion in four states.

Sitting in his Madison Square Garden dressing room Monday night, Frazier said he hoped his technical knockout victory at 2:33 of the 11th round ended the myth that Mathis owned Frazier.

"This ought to prove who owns who," said the 204½ pound former meat cutter.

Frazier, of course, referred to the pair of three-round decisions he lost to Mathis in the 1964 Olympic Trials. He's been haunted ever since by the spectre of the hulking heavyweight from Grand Rapids, Mich.

Frazier admitted he had grown tired of hearing how Mathis had licked him. Referring to those who picked Mathis to do it a third time, Frazier said, "People weren't fighting Mathis. I was. I knew I would win. I couldn't predict the round because then Mathis would have been ready."

Now recognized as champion in New York, Massachusetts, Maine and Illinois, the 24-year-old Frazier said he was ready to settle undisputed possession of the heavyweight title taken from Cassius Clay for violating the draft law.

Durham and Frazier said their strategy was to hammer at the belly until they wore down the big oak. Durham said he told his tiger before the bell for the 11th. "We're going out and kayo this guy in this round."

Did he feel like the world champion?
"What do you think man?" retorted Frazier in an annoyed tone. "What do you think I was fighting for out there?"

Mathis, in a brief confrontation with newsmen, said he felt strong at the end. "I don't know why the referee stopped it," he said, although he staggered to his feet at nine and obviously was in distress.

"I thought I was beating him," he mumbled. "I just got caught with a left hook."

He and Frazier finally agreed on something.

Somerset May Prolong The Season

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Willie Somerset of Houston acts as if he doesn't want to see the season end, and his 41-point performance Monday night was a step toward prolonging it for the Mavericks.

The 5-foot-9 guard shot Houston into a lead and kept the Mavericks in front en route to a 130-120 victory over Oakland in an American Basketball League game at Houston.

The triumph tightened Houston's hold on fourth place, the last playoff spot, in the Western Division to two games over the Oaks and 2½ over Anaheim. Denver increased its hold on second place with a 108-98 home victory over third-place Dallas, but the Rockets failed to gain on leading New Orleans, which tumbled Indiana 128-118 at Fort Wayne, Ind., in the only other game.

There were no National Basketball Association games. With the season ending March 22, Houston's two-game lead looks more substantial every day. Somerset's scoring put the Mavericks into an early lead and when the Oaks pulled within 68-64, he took over again and shot Houston into a 95-81 spread. Jim Hadnot had 28 points for Oakland.

Denver, 2½ games behind New Orleans and now 2½ ahead of Dallas, shot into a 64-50 half-time lead and then had to hang on.

Larry Jones scored 30 points and Lonnie Wright 23 for Denver while John Beasley had 27 for the Chaparrals.

New Orleans, losing 25-17, ran off a 16-2 spurt and raced away from Indiana as Jackie Moreland and Jimmy Jones each hit 25 points. Freddie Lewis scored 26 for the Pacers.

Mixed Up Math Leads To Problems

By MIKE RECHT

Associated Press Sports Writer
Frank Robinson and Johnny Callison feel Baltimore and Philadelphia are adding insult to injury with their money offers to play baseball this year. The Orioles and Phillies, on the other hand, feel Robinson and Callison have added their figures wrong.

As a result of these mixed up mathematics of baseball value, the two slugging outfielders remained two of the biggest name holdouts as major league spring training moves on.

Clete Boyer, third baseman for Atlanta, was another who has not found the right answer in his talks with the Braves.

But some agreeable figures were reached Monday as Frank Howard signed the largest money contract ever, $47,500, by a Washington player; Mel Queen, Tommy Helms and rookie Jay Ritchie ended their holdout with Cincinnati, and the Orioles did come to terms with Dave Johnson and Curt Bleafary.

Robinson, however, remained Baltimore's big problem, and if everyone's figures are correct, the American League Triple Crown winner two years ago and the Orioles are $15,000 apart.

Robinson, who sat out a month last season with double vision after a baseline collision and still managed to hit .311 with 94 runs batted in and 30 home runs, says he is standing by $125,000.

Personnel director Harry Dalton of the Orioles, who originally offered last year's $100,000 salary, then raised it to $105,000, reportedly increased his offer to $110,000 Monday after talking to Robinson 1½ hours.

For Callison, a former All-Star outfielder who suffered a torn cartilage last year and played in considerable pain for some time, the problem was a little different. He was being asked to take a cut from the reported $40,000 to $50,000 he got in 1967.

Campus 'Disenchantment' with Business Apparently is Not Hurting Recruiting

EDITOR'S NOTE—Perplexity about young people—their manners, morals and motives—was expressed often in a recent Associated Press Managing Editors Association study of what readers are talking and worrying about. This article focuses on the attitude of collegians toward corporate careers.

By GEORGE TAYLOR
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Are college students becoming increasingly disenchanted with business as a career?

A loud but apparently small group of undergraduates says yes.

Some college career counselors and recruiters say no, bridling at the suggestion that corporate life is losing its appeal. Other educators and businessmen are working to combat any antibusiness feeling although generally there is doubt that it is a serious revolt.

These are the conclusions from an Associated Press survey at major colleges and universities in different parts of the country.

Criticism of business by students plays on two overriding themes: (1) going into a corporation means losing your individuality and (2) big business does not do enough to solve the country's social and economic problems.

The subject is a favorite for dormitory and coffee shop bull sessions. And the debate quickens as colleges across the country start welcoming corporate recruiters wooing their June graduates.

Here are some typical antibusiness sentiments.

"This generation has to work for something other than the dollar," said Lawrence Susskind, 21, a senior at Columbia in New York City.

Said a junior at the University of Texas in Austin who asked anonymity, "Business has an image of an unstimulating life. The only reason you would go into it is for money and if you wanted to get ahead you would have to play interoffice politics."

"I'd like to participate in transforming American society completely and radically—making it more egalitarian and more democratic," said Douglas P. Seaton, 21, a Princeton history junior from Cleveland. "I'll probably wind up organizing poor whites or Negroes in ghettos for political action."

Peter J. Kaminsky, 21, of West Orange, N.J., also at Princeton, said "I would only go into business if I had despaired of all social progress. If I do what I want, I'll be poverty stricken. I'd like to be a rich revolutionary."

Said another student, "I don't believe all this talk about how you can express your social concern through business because the people expressing social concern won't move into important positions. He'll be an outcast, like the company Negro. A showcase with no influence."

College officials and corporation recruiters are becoming more conscious of the criticism.

Some deny that antibusiness feeling is on a scale that should cause concern.

Dr. C.O. Strother, university relations director for Union Carbide Corp., which hires 1,000 graduates a year, said, "What antibusiness feeling? I believe it's a pure fabrication."

John Moritz, placement director at Villanova University in Pennsylvania, said, "The ambition of students today is no different than it was five years ago, or even 10 years ago—and a very big number will go into business."

E. H. Cummings, placement director at Lafayette College in Easton, Pa., thinks there is "some" antibusiness feeling among collegians "but it's by no means greater. It's just more noisy and newsworthy."

Chancellor W. Clarke Wescoe of the University of Kansas said, "We've never experienced this kind of (antibusiness) feeling here. We have more students signing up for interviews for business careers than ever in our history."

Paul V. Grambsch, dean of the University of Minnesota's School of Business Administration, said that the notion that students are turning against business careers is open to question.

"There are more alternatives for students today, more choice for them to make. They don't accept the idea that a business career is what they must be interested in. The current generation is more questioning about what to do with their lives."

Businessmen and recruiters who regard the antibusiness noises with some concern appear to be going on the offensive.

Robert W. Galvin, the 44-year-old chairman of Motorola, Inc., has been carrying on printed debates with students in 29 campus newspapers for two years.

The students assail corporate jobs ("dullsville") and the ingredients of corporate life.

In calm and measured words, Galvin urges them to learn more about business and reassures them that the corporate life is filled with challenges. "I think that in some areas business has projected itself too weakly," Galvin said.

Dr. Raymond F. Rolfe, corporate recruiting director for Dow Chemical Co., which has been the target of violent anti-Vietnam protests because it makes napalm, said, "You've got to be gutsy with them (students). You have to be candid and honest ... You can't just dangle a buck in front of them."

Industries are stepping up their recruiting efforts at the Berkeley campus of the University of California, which has been out front in the ranks of student protests. In 1967, more than 800 corporate prospect-hunters interviewed on campus, compared with 550 the previous year.

In a survey of the current freshman class at Berkeley, 34 per cent of the 1,700 who responded from the 4,388-member class had fathers in business. Only 3.4 per cent said they had any desire to follow their father's footsteps.

John Fox, director of the office of graduate and career plans at Harvard, thinks the complaints of some students that business generally doesn't do enough for society are valid. "Graduates here feel their talents are best applied in government or in professional training or in volunteer work, like VISTA or the Peace Corps," Fox said.

Dow's Rolfe thinks that a lot of the antibusiness sentiment comes from liberal arts students and those in the social sciences who are not being courted with the fervor reserved for technical students.

As might be expected, the survey found some students ready to speak out for business careers.

Edwin M. Sykes III, 21, a Princeton history senior from San Antonio, said, "It's foolish to think you can reform capitalism from the university."

Steve Waters, 21, of West Hartford Conn., a Harvard student, said, "Business is a conduit to the establishment where the monetary remuneration and the power attained can be of great use to run for office and be elected to it."

Statistics are of little help in trying to gauge the depth of antibusiness sentiment.

As one college official put it, "If a company needs 150 men for its junior executive training program, it recruits on campuses and gets its 150 men. But who's to say if it got the best or the 150 it would have gotten if most seniors were aching to get into corporations?"

U.S. Office of Education figures show enrollment in business schools is holding its own. Bachelor, master's and doctorate degrees in business or commerce accounted for 11 per cent of the 490,600 degrees granted in the United States in the school year that ended in June, 1961.

In 1966, the last year for which government figures are available, the number of degrees had risen to 683,100. The business and commerce share was still 11 per cent.

What's behind the antipathy of some collegians to corporate careers?

"It's the generation gap, youth vs. age, the have nots vs. the haves," said Edward D. McDouglas, director of managerial and professional development for the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

"The students want the assets of their parents but they're unwilling to put in time on the treadmill that will get them their share of the pie."

"And they're smart enough to know they're a needed commodity. In a sense, it's generational blackmail. They know others are worried and they're probably enjoying being the center of attention. It's the spoiled child sort of thing."

Dr. Jerome G. Beame, a New York management psychology consultant, said, "You're dealing with a generation of people who have nothing positive to stand for and it's easier to be positively against."

"Business is becoming far too compartmentalized. There's not enough room for expressions of individuality. Jobs have to be identified in terms of functions and not boxes on an organizational chart. The kids are rebelling against it."

San Juan Hit By Pollution From Tanker

SAN JUAN P.R. (AP) — Five San Juan hotels have closed their beaches after oil from a wrecked tanker spread over the sands, but other hotels west of the spreading oil slick reported their beaches still unpolluted today.

Thousands of tourists left the beaches Monday as oil kept rolling in from the 12,065-ton Ocean Eagle, which split in half on a reef Sunday as she approached San Juan Bay. The Liberian tanker carried six million gallons of oil.

"Most tourists seem to be taking the problem in stride," said Puerto Rico's director of tourism, Hector Pinero.

There were reports that some hotels were getting cancellations, but there was no indication that these were running to any great number.

Pinero said beaches sullied by oil, could be cleaned by the removal of an inch of so of sand.

Marine biologists said, however, that "no matter what is done, we have a serious problem on our hands." One expert said beaches would be polluted for months. By late Monday the slick covered about 10 miles of water.

Three tugboats tried in vain to pull the Ocean Eagle's bow from the harbor mouth Monday, and its oil continued to spill. A Coast Guard spokesman said the plan had been to drag the bow at least 150 yards away and sink it in 100 feet of water.

President Johnson had been relaxing for the weekend at Ramoey Air Force base, in western Puerto Rico, when the tanker wrecked. He ordered American conservation specialists to help local authorities and Coast Guard crews fighting the oil slick.

Coast Guard ships poured emulsifying chemicals onto the oil, trying to dissolve and sink it. A spokesman reported "encouraging results" but said the slick was still a major threat.

Clear Way To Impeach In Panama

PANAMA (AP) — Panama's National Assembly elected an all-opposition committee today to investigate impeachment charges against President Marco A. Robles. It was a clear indication that the opposition, with a 30-12 majority, plans to go through with the impeachment.

The election of the committee confirmed the collapse of a compromise reached earlier to avert a political upheaval.

About 2,000 opposition supporters massed outside the assembly hall, called for the president's ouster and draped hanged man's nooses on lampposts as a warning to deputies.

The committee has 10 days to return to the assembly with a recommendation to dismiss the complaint against Robles or put him on trial. The complaint charges that he violated the constitutional prohibition against political activity by a president by throwing the weight of his administration behind presidential candidate David Samudio. Samudio has been nominated for the May elections by four pro-government parties.

The government minority in the assembly denounced the session as a parliamentary coup d'etat.

The compromise that collapsed called for Robles to name a new "nonpolitical" cabinet. In return the assembly would name a committee of two opposition and one government deputies who in time would recommend dismissal of the charges against the president. Robles also agreed to some changes in the electoral law.

This broke down when the opposition said the new ministers must be named before the special assembly session Monday night and Robles delayed.

If the impeachment petition is accepted, Robles will be suspended from office pending trial. First Vice President Max Delvalle, an opposition leader, would govern the country until a verdict was handed down. Opposition leaders claimed the National Guard, the country's army, would abide by the assembly's decision.

Negro Appointed To School Board

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — James M. Griffin, 35, chairman of the Baltimore chapter, Congress of Racial Equality, was appointed to the city's school board Monday.

Mayor Thomas J. D'Alesandro III announced appointment of Griffin to succeed J. Percy Bond, Morgan State College registrar who has resigned because of ill health.

'GIFT' BOURBON

BARDSTOWN, Ky. (AP) — One of Al Durrante's friends, after hunting on a farmer's land, presented him with a bottle of inexpensive bourbon.

"That's just right," the farmer sighed after sampling the gift.

"What do you mean 'just right'?" asked the hunter.

"If it were any worse," the farmer explained, "I couldn't drink it, and if it were any better, you never would have given it to me."

Imported Items To Be Auctioned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thousands of imported items in the hands of customs officials including 8,500 bottles of liquor and a coffin, go on the auction block Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The U.S. Customs Office said most items were unclaimed merchandise. The liquor was confiscated because California's import laws restrict tourists to one fifth apiece. Federal law allows five fifths.
